

My website will be designed to let users create their own accounts and share some meals and they can add a recipe for the meals. The website has to protect users' passwords. Gastronomes and chefs will be the most demographic of the users of my website. My website is going to use data like recipes details and users can add a dish type or a cuisine type to each meal. Users also can see the meals that others posted. (My rough database diagram is below)

The API: <https://developer.edamam.com/edamam-docs-recipe-api>